Don't you sometimes wish you were born Picasso?

Drinking dreams from clouds, not simply sipping

but entire forests in one gulp.

and taking France for granted, because it was yours to take!

I don't remember Dora.

or the castle or the acrobats

I don't remember black nights fishing by oil lamps

I remember that face sloping back mongoloid and stern and I remember the guitar

a breath brown and eyes and the old blue man sitting outside singing songs delicate songs

songs that make you, yes, even you, Mr. Vermeer, whisper.
